

Dawud Abdur-Rahman

Chair, Bryans Road Business Association

Dawud Abdur-Rahman is Principal of DAR Project Management Consulting, LLC, where he leverages more than 40 years of experience to lead impactful initiatives in requirements development, organizational design, urban planning, real estate, educational partnerships, community engagement, and project management training. He holds a BBA from Temple University, an MBA from Averett University, and a Master's Certificate in Project Management from The George Washington University.

A former senior program and project executive with the U.S. General Services Administration (GSA), Dawud has a distinguished record of managing teams and divisions responsible for the full lifecycle of publicly owned and leased facility projects—from planning and design through delivery and operations.

His clients have included the City of Alexandria and Arlington Public Schools. Current clients include the Academy of Hope Adult Public Charter School in Washington, D.C.

Dawud's civic leadership includes serving as a Charles County Planning Commissioner, Chair of the Bryans Road Business Association, and an active leader within the Charles County Chamber of Commerce, where he chairs the Business and Education Committee and co-chairs the Economic Development and Transportation Committee. He also represents the Chamber on Charles County Public Schools' CTE Local Advisory Council. In addition, he serves on the Board of Directors of the Accokeek Foundation and participates in a community stakeholder group dedicated to preserving and amplifying the intertwined Black and Indigenous history of Bryans Road, Indian Head, and Pomonkey.

A lifelong advocate for education and mentorship, Dawud supports the ACE Mentor Program, helping inspire the next generation of architects, builders, engineers, and planners. He was also part of the founding team that established the Charles County Interfaith Commission.

In addition to his professional and civic work, Dawud is a self-published author who writes and lectures on Al-Islam and the Black American experience, exploring how faith, culture, and history inform leadership and community development.

Through his work, Dawud Abdur-Rahman combines technical expertise with a passion for empowerment and community advancement. His career reflects not only professional and project-management excellence but also a deep commitment to social responsibility, cross-sector collaboration, and building public-private partnerships that drive lasting impact.
